A Toolkit, Not a Textbook

Read this first

This isn't a linear course - it's a set of five practical tools you can use in any order, whenever you need that specific piece. Come back to whichever page matches where you're stuck this week: idea clarity, your offer, your customer, your price, or your first 90 days.

What's inside:

- ☐ A business idea clarity worksheet
- ☐ A simple offer builder
- ☐ An ideal customer snapshot
- ☐ A gut-check pricing worksheet
- ☐ A first-90-days roadmap for launching or relaunching

Idea Clarity Worksheet

Get specific before you get moving

Question	Your answer
What problem are you actually solving?
Who has this problem most urgently?
How do they currently solve it (or not)?
Why are you the right person to solve it for them?

The Offer Builder

An offer people actually understand in one sentence

Piece	Your answer
What you're selling (in plain words)
The result it gets someone
What makes it different from the obvious alternative
One-sentence offer: "I help [who] get [result] through [what]."

Ideal Customer Snapshot

Vague customers get vague marketing

Describe one real, specific person - not a demographic.

Where she is now

What's frustrating her right before she'd find you?

Where she wants to be

What does "solved" actually look like for her?

What she needs to hear

What's the one sentence that would make her trust you?

The Pricing Gut-Check

Price with your numbers, not your nerves

Question	Your answer
What does this cost you in time and materials?
What's the lowest price that still respects your time?
What do comparable offers charge?
Your price, and why:

First 90 Days Roadmap

Launch is a sequence, not a leap

Focus	Month 1	Month 2	Month 3
What you're building
Who you're reaching
One goal by month's end

Pressure-Test It With AI

"Here's my offer: [paste it]. Play devil's advocate - what would make a real customer hesitate to buy this?"

"Here's my ideal customer snapshot: [paste it]. Help me write three pieces of content that would speak directly to her."

"Here's my pricing gut-check: [paste it]. Help me sanity-check whether this price actually covers my time and is competitive."
