The Money AI Prompt Pack

Ready-to-paste AI prompts for the money decisions you're usually left to figure out alone.

*"You don't need a financial advisor for every decision.
You need a smarter first conversation."*

How to Use This Pack

Read this first

These prompts pair with any AI chat tool you already use. They're written to be copied exactly as-is, with the bracketed parts swapped for your own numbers and situation. This isn't financial advice from the AI — it's a way to think more clearly and catch blind spots before you decide, using your own real numbers.

A Note on Limits

AI is useful for organizing your thinking, comparing options, and asking good follow-up questions. It's not a replacement for a licensed financial advisor for anything complex — taxes, investing strategy, or legal debt situations. Use it to think, not to outsource the final decision.

Everyday Spending Decisions

For the "should I buy this?" moments

"I'm considering buying [item] for [price]. My monthly budget for this category is [amount] and I've spent [amount] so far this month. Help me think through whether this fits, and what I'd need to adjust if it doesn't."

"I keep buying [type of purchase] impulsively. Ask me questions to help me understand what's actually driving that pattern – boredom, stress, habit – so I can address the real cause instead of just restricting the spending."

Big Financial Decisions

For the moments that deserve more than a gut reaction

"I'm deciding between [option A] and [option B] for [big purchase/decision]. Here are the numbers: [list them]. Help me build a simple pros-and-cons comparison based on total cost, not just the sticker price."

"I'm thinking about [financial decision – moving, changing jobs, taking on debt for something]. Ask me questions that would help me stress-test this decision beyond just 'can I afford it right now.'"

Money Mindset Check-Ins

For when the numbers are fine but the feelings aren't

"I just felt [anxious/ashamed/avoidant] about my money after [what happened]. Help me separate what's an actual financial problem from what's an old story or fear talking."

"I compare my finances to [someone specific or 'people online'] a lot. Ask me questions to help me get clear on what actually matters to me financially, separate from that comparison."

Planning & Goal-Setting

For quarterly or yearly money check-ins

"Here's where my finances stand: [income, debt, savings]. Help me identify the single highest-leverage money move I could make in the next 90 days."

"It's the end of the [month/quarter]. Here's what happened financially: [summary]. Ask me reflective questions to help me see patterns in my money habits I might be missing."

What Came Up

Negotiating & Advocating for Yourself

For the conversations that involve someone else's money too

"I want to negotiate [salary/rate/bill]. Here's my situation: [details]. Help me draft a confident, non-apologetic script for this conversation."

"I need to ask [someone] about [money-related topic – splitting a bill, repayment, a shared expense]. Help me write this in a way that's direct but not confrontational."

SMARTER CONVERSATIONS

You Don't Have to Figure This Out Alone

Come back to this pack any time a money decision feels foggy. The right prompt does most of the thinking work — you just have to answer honestly.
