

CEO GIRL AI

The Business Idea Finder + AI Validation Kit

Step 1 of 6: Stop collecting business ideas in your Notes app. Find the one worth actually building — and prove it before you spend a dollar.

"Tell me what to sell, and help me get it launched."

CEO GIRL AI

WELCOME

The Idea-to-Launch System

Where this kit fits in your build

Most business content assumes you already know what you're selling. This one doesn't. The CEO Girl AI system is six steps, in order, and this is the first: find a business idea you can actually stand behind, then validate it with real signals — not just a gut feeling — before you build anything else.

Step	What it does
1. Idea Finder + Validation Kit	You are here — find and pressure-test your idea
2. Offer Builder System	Turn the validated idea into a sellable offer
3. Ideal Customer AI Profile Kit	Get precise on exactly who it's for
4. Pricing Calculator + Guide	Price it with confidence, not a guess
5. 30-Day Business Launch System	Build and launch on a real timeline
6. Content & Marketing Kit	Keep selling after launch week ends

By the end of this kit, you'll have:

- ☐ A shortlist of real business ideas pulled from your actual life, not a generic list
- ☐ A scoring system to find the one worth building first
- ☐ An AI-assisted validation process to check demand before you build
- ☐ A one-paragraph idea statement you can say out loud with confidence

Where Real Ideas Actually Come From

Not a lightning bolt — a pattern in your own life

The idea you're overthinking probably isn't going to be the one. The strongest business ideas usually sit in one of three places: something you're already good at that people ask you for help with, a problem you personally solved and now do faster than most people, or an industry you've worked inside long enough to see what's missing.

Mine Your Own Experience

List answers, don't filter yet:

What do people already come to you for advice on?

What have you gotten unusually good at out of necessity?

What industry or job have you worked in long enough to see its blind spots?

What's something you searched for and couldn't find a good version of?

Your Idea Shortlist

Ten ideas, no editing yet

Quantity before quality. Pull from Part 1 and just get ten ideas on paper — even the ones that feel obvious or silly. You can't score an idea that never got written down.

#	Idea	Where it came from
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10

The Scoring Matrix

Narrow ten ideas down to your top three

Score each idea 1–5 on the four criteria below. Be honest, especially on "energy" — the most profitable idea you resent doing will lose to a decent idea you'll actually stick with.

Idea	Energy (do I want to do this daily?)	Speed (could I start this month?)	Skill (can I deliver this well now?)	Money (will people pay for this?)	Total

Your Top Idea

The one with the highest score — or the one you can't stop thinking about, if it's close. Write it here.

.....

AI-Assisted Validation

Check real signals before you build anything

Validation isn't about certainty — no one gets certainty before launching. It's about finding enough evidence that people have this problem and would pay to solve it, so you're not building in a vacuum.

"I'm considering a business idea: [describe it in 2-3 sentences]. Help me identify 5 signals I could look for online right now (forums, reviews, social posts, search trends) that would tell me whether people actually want this."

"Here's my business idea: [describe it]. Play devil's advocate — what are the 3 strongest reasons this might not work, based on the market as you understand it? Be honest, not encouraging."

"I found this evidence that people want [your idea]: [paste what you found]. Help me assess how strong this signal actually is versus how much I might be seeing what I want to see."

What You Found

Signal	What it tells you

Red Flags & Green Lights

A gut-check before you commit

Green light	Red flag
You'd be excited to work on this even on a slow month	You only like the idea of having built it, not the daily work
You can name 3 real people who'd be a fit customer today	You can't picture a single specific buyer
You could create a rough version of this in under a month	It requires resources, licenses, or capital you don't have yet
People are already paying someone for a version of this	You'd be the first person ever asked to pay for this

Gut Check

Reading the list above honestly, does your top idea look more green or more red? If it's mostly red, that's useful information now — not a failure, just a redirect back to Part 3.

Your One-Paragraph Idea Statement

Say it out loud before you move to Step 2

Fill in the template

"I help ___ (who) achieve ___ (transformation/result) through ___ (your idea), because ___ (why you're credible to offer this)."

.....

The Confidence Test

Read your statement out loud to yourself, or better, to one honest friend. If it makes you shrink or over-explain, it's not specific enough yet — go back and sharpen it before moving on.

IDEA VALIDATED

You Know What You're Building Now

That's the hardest part most people never actually finish. Next: turn this idea into an offer someone can say yes to.

Continue to Step 2: The Offer Builder System.