Cleaning Without the Sunday Dread

Read this first

Cleaning feels overwhelming when everything gets saved for one big session. This system spreads tasks across three rhythms — daily resets, a weekly rotation, and a monthly deep-clean list — so no single day requires more than 20–30 minutes.

The Three Rhythms

- ☐ Daily — quick resets that prevent buildup (5–10 min)
- ☐ Weekly — one task per day, rotating through the house
- ☐ Monthly — the deeper tasks that don't need constant attention

DAILY

The 10-Minute Daily Reset

Do this every day, no exceptions

Task	Done
Dishes washed or in the dishwasher
Kitchen counters wiped
One load of laundry started or put away
Beds made
Floors spot-checked for obvious mess

WEEKLY

One Task Per Day Rotation

Spread the deeper cleaning across the week

Day	Task
Monday	Bathrooms — toilets, sinks, mirrors
Tuesday	Kitchen deep clean — appliance fronts, stovetop
Wednesday	Dusting — all surfaces, including shelves
Thursday	Vacuum/mop all floors
Friday	Laundry catch-up and linens
Saturday	Bedrooms — full tidy and reset
Sunday	Rest, or a light catch-up on anything missed

Adjust to Your Life

This is a template, not a rulebook. Swap days around your actual schedule — the point is one task a day, not this exact order.

MONTHLY

The Deep-Clean List

Pick 2-3 from this list each month, not all at once

Task	Month completed
Wipe down baseboards
Clean inside the refrigerator
Wash windows and mirrors thoroughly
Deep clean the oven
Wash shower curtain / deep clean shower
Vacuum under furniture
Clean light fixtures and ceiling fans
Wipe down cabinet fronts

When You Fall Behind

A missed week isn't a failed system

The Reset Day

If a week gets away from you, don't try to catch up on everything at once. Pick one "reset day," do the daily basics plus whichever single weekly task feels most urgent, and pick the rotation back up from wherever today falls.

Getting Help

If you live with others, this rotation can split across people — assign days or tasks rather than trying to do all of it solo. A system only someone else can't run isn't really a system.

THE RHYTHM IS SET

Cleaning Stopped Being a Big Event

Ten minutes a day, one task a week, a few deep-clean items a month — that's genuinely enough.
