The One Planner That Holds It All

Read this first

Most planners make you choose - a goals planner, a money tracker, a routine builder, a journal. This one holds four parts of your life in a single system, in the order that actually makes them work together: your vision and goals set the direction, your routines carry you day to day, your money gets a plan of its own, and a weekly rhythm keeps the whole thing honest. Move through it in order the first time, then return to whichever part needs attention.

Inside this planner:

- ☐ Part 1 - Vision & Goals: your life wheel, top priorities, and 90-day map
- ☐ Part 2 - Routines: a morning and evening rhythm that runs on autopilot
- ☐ Part 3 - Money: an honest snapshot and a simple monthly system
- ☐ Part 4 - Mindset & Reflection: a weekly check-in and a way to actually notice your growth

The Life Wheel

Rate where you are today, honestly, out of 10

Area	Score (1-10)	One sentence on why
Career / purpose
Money
Health & body
Relationships
Personal growth
Fun & rest
Home & environment

What Stands Out

Which score surprised you? Which one, if it moved up even two points, would change everything else?

Choosing Your Top 3

Focus beats a long list, every time

Pick three priorities for the next 90 days, pulled from your lowest-scoring areas above. Not ten - three.

Priority	Why this, why now	What "done" looks like at Day 90
2.
3.

The 90-Day Map

Three priorities, three months, one map

Priority	Month 1	Month 2	Month 3
1.
2.
3.

The One Constraint

What's most likely to derail this plan - time, money, energy, a specific habit? Name your workaround now, while you're thinking clearly.

Design Your Morning

Start with the minimum, not the fantasy

Pick three morning actions, small enough to do half asleep, that set your tone for the day.

Order	Action	Time it takes
1
2
3

Design Your Evening

Tomorrow starts tonight

Before bed: lay out tomorrow's essentials, glance at tomorrow's calendar, write one thing you're proud of today.

Action	Trigger (right after ____)
Lay out essentials
Glance at calendar
Write one win

The 2-Day Rule

Plan for the bad days now, while you're thinking clearly

Never miss the same routine two days in a row. One miss is human - two starts a new pattern. Write a "minimum viable version" of your morning and evening routine below: the smallest possible version, 30 seconds or less, for the days everything falls apart.

Morning minimum: _____ | Evening minimum: _____

The Honest Money Snapshot

You can't plan what you haven't looked at

Category	Amount
Monthly income (take-home)
Monthly essential expenses
Monthly debt payments
Current savings
Total debt

Your Simple Money Rhythm

Small, repeatable checkpoints beat willpower

Ritual	When	What it covers
Weekly money date		Balances, upcoming bills, one goal check-in
Monthly reset		Review last month, adjust one category, set next month's focus

This Quarter's Money Goal

One specific, measurable money goal for the next 90 days: _____

Your Weekly Check-In

Photocopy this rhythm every Sunday

Priority	This week's one action	When it's scheduled
1.
2.
3.

The Monthly Reflection

Track real change, not just busy weeks

Once a month, answer honestly:

What moved forward

What actually progressed this month, in any of the four parts of this planner?

What needs to shrink

What goal or habit needs to get smaller before it'll stick?

Who I'm becoming

What's one way you're different now than you were a month ago?

Run Your Weekly Review With AI

Use these at the end of each week to close the loop on all four parts.

"Here's my life wheel, my top 3 priorities, and how this week went: [paste it]. Ask me questions to help me see the week honestly."

"Here's my morning and evening routine and how consistent I was this week: [describe it]. Help me figure out what's actually getting in the way."

"Here's my money snapshot and this month's spending: [paste it]. Help me see the picture clearly, without judgment."

"Compare who I was a month ago to who I am now, based on what I've told you. What growth might I be underselling myself on?"

Every 90 Days, Come Back Here

Rescore your life wheel, revisit all four parts, rebuild the map

Which of the four parts (Vision, Routines, Money, Mindset) needs the most attention next quarter?

What's one thing from this planner that's officially part of how you live now, no longer something you have to think about?

.....

ONE SYSTEM, FULLY YOURS

This Is How It All Fits Together

Your goals, your days, your money, and your mindset were never separate - now your planner isn't either. Return to any part, any time.

This planner is designed to be lived in for a full quarter. Revisit Part 1 every 90 days.
